In her screen print "I Pray For Blindness," Lisa Hecht mashes together a newspaper clipping, camouflage pattern and war images to further her investigation of how repeat patterns create literal and socio/political narratives by tugging at our collective memory. Hecht is fascinated by how a repeat pattern can become political. Her work is featured in the "End of an Empire" show, currently on display at Grass Gallery, 107 Main St. in North Adams.
